New Title

- Fully illustrated with designers, technical data and materials of each project

Twenty-one projects for new domestic spaces, realised from the end of the 1990s to the present day in New York and other major American cities. Examined side-by-side, they provide a composite overview of the new ways of perceiving and living in the domestic environment, ways that involve the function and distribution issues but also the architectural, material, and atmospheric properties of the place. The classic loft type is accompanied by new exclusive apartments and penthouses that offer an entirely new gamut of concepts in home and living design for the new millennium.
